seven sayings come from a book which contained moral maxims, derived from various sources, these drawn, perhaps, from the apocryphal Gospel of Peter, or the Gospel of the Egyptians, or some other such writing. Our fragment was probably written in the first part of the second century. A page at the end of the pamphlet suggests corrections in the reading of three passages (vss. 1, 18, 41-42) in the Gospel of Peter.—C. W. VOTAW.

The Life and Letters of Paul the Apostle. By Lyman Abbott. (Boston and New York: Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1898; pp. xii+332; $1.50.) This volume of Dr. Abbott is marked by the excellencies of a nervous, earnest, clear style, a determination to plunge to the heart of things, and a conviction that the essence of Paulinism does not lie in its Judaistic form, but in its formulation of a magnificent Christian experience. It makes no serious pretension of great scholarship, but is none the less in touch with scholarly work. It mediates most admirably between the student and the general reader, and thus does for Paul something that was needed. The man who can read this book without being converted to the main positions of Paulinism will be obliged to combat his better judgment on nearly every page.—SHAILER MATHEWS.

St. Pauli Brief an die Galater in Bibelstunden für die Gemeinde ausgelegt. Von W. F. Besser. Zweite Auflage. (Halle a. S.: Richard Mühlmann's Verlagsbuchhandlung, 1898; pp. 387; M. 3.) Besser's Bibelstunden are well known in Germany. They are practically a series of popular expository commentaries, in which the prime aim is spiritual instruction and edification. But they are solid; they are based on ripe exegetical study and are guided by the tact of the true interpreter; and they weave in a great deal even of critical material. This is the second edition of the exposition on Galatians; some of the other volumes have run up to the seventh and ninth edition.—WALTER RAUSCHENBUSCH.

The Kingdom (Basileia). An Exegetical Study. By George Dana Boardman. (New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1899; pp. x+348; $2.) During his long ministerial life Dr. Boardman has been a devout and devoted student of the Bible, and a most apt and attractive teacher of it, as his previously published books show. This work on the kingdom of God, prepared since his retirement from the pastorate, indicates that his love for his favorite pursuit has suffered no abatement. While
